Details on your candidature

I am applying for the position of N&AHP Committee Member Elect, driven by my passion for advancing the role of non-medical professionals in intensive care and by my commitment to contributing to the evolution of our section. My career path, spanning across Italy and the United Kingdom, has provided me with a unique perspective on the challenges and opportunities faced by the critical care workforce in different healthcare systems. This international experience has shaped my motivation to promote collaboration, harmonisation of practice, and the strengthening of our collective voice within ESICM.

As an Advanced Critical Care Pharmacist at Oxford University Hospitals, I work daily within a large tertiary ICU where I contribute to evidence-based patient care, clinical governance, and service development. My professional journey has encompassed direct clinical responsibilities in both adult and neonatal intensive care, leadership in medication safety and nutrition support, and the delivery of multidisciplinary education. I have been privileged to lead and participate in projects focused on quality improvement, guideline implementation, and antimicrobial stewardship—areas that resonate closely with ESICM's mission of improving patient outcomes through multidisciplinary collaboration.

In this role, I envisage contributing particularly to workforce development and guideline creation. I strongly believe that advancing clinical pharmacy practice within the European critical care setting is essential for improving patient safety, medication optimisation, and antimicrobial stewardship. I would like to support the committee in shaping frameworks that recognise and enhance the contribution of pharmacists and allied health professionals in ICUs across Europe. I also see opportunities to expand our educational offerings, develop consensus guidance on best practices, and create platforms for sharing experiences across disciplines and countries.

My current involvement with ESICM includes serving as a faculty member for the Sepsis, Severe Infections and Stewardship Pathway and active participation in the Pharmacotherapy and Pharmacology Section meetings. These roles have deepened my appreciation of the Society's commitment to education and multidisciplinary engagement, and I would welcome the chance to further strengthen this work through the N&AHP Committee.

I am confident that my combination of clinical expertise, international experience, and enthusiasm for advancing the role of allied health professionals makes me well-placed to serve in this capacity. I would be honoured to contribute to the committee's work in developing the future of our workforce, fostering collaboration, and ensuring that N&AHP perspectives are fully integrated into ESICM's strategy and activities.
